SCREEN NEWS NOTES

Some of the most realistic storm of fects ever shown in motion pictures are embodied in "Fate's Midnight Hour," a Kalem drama, which is scheduled to be released Saturday, October 10. In this story, a girl enters a house for the purpose of slaying the man who had caused the death of her mother and sister. Before she can shoot a boit of lightning crashes through the window, slaying the man. Alice Joyce portrays one of the strongest roles of her career in this story. The beautiful Kalem actress is surrounded by an all-star cast of players, including Margurite Courtot, Irene Boyle, Mary Ross, Tom Moore and Jere ers, including Margurite Courtot, Irene

Every one knows that he is a prosperous ranch owner and raises onions; that is an old tale now. Few know, however, what a bully good cook he is. He lives in well-appointed apartments, for he likes comfort, and has earned his right to like it, too. He has a neat little kitchen where he turns out the most appetizing suppers for his pals, and it is considered quite an honor to get an invitation to eat at Billy's.

He says he enjoys it, but he draws the line at wiping the dishes, and instead, has a Jap assistant chef who does that part of it. Yes, he is just as good an actor as he is his own wife, and those who see the American protures can testify to his acting ability, although they have not tasted his cooking. MORE SUNSHINE.

(Copyright, 1914.) Begin this season of cool weather with the resolution to have more sunshine in our home than you ever had before-to spend more hours in the sunshine your-self and to see to it that the members of your family get more liberal doses of this most potent of nature's remedies—sun-

One obvious way to get more sunshine in your house is to have more windows cut into the walls, and this is often necessary in a house that was built a genera-tion ago before people understood the value of sunshine. Often an extra window cut in the side of a home lets in ar amount of sunshine and fresh air that makes up for the cost of the improvement in better feelings and better spirits before in better feelings and better spirits better a month is out. Then another means of securing more sunshine is by substituting glass doors for the old wooden ones where possible. In some old-fashioned houses the substitution of two French or long windows in place of the former smaller ones has greatly added to the sunshine of

Of course, if you are to revel in all this Of course, if you are to revel in all this sunshine you must cease worrying about having carpets and hangings faded by the aunshine. It is a good rule to make in buying new things for your house never to get anything that is not sunproof. Carpets and hangings and wallpaper that have to be shielded from the direct rays of the sunshine ought to be bankined from every sensible household.

Another thing that keeps sunshine from our houses is the time-honored article of our houses is the time-honored article of furniture—blinds and window shades. Of course, inside blinds are seldom seen nowadays, excepting in warm and sunshiny climes. It is so easy to take inside blinds down during the winter and re-place them in the summer that they need not be a burce of much trouble. Outside blinds, too, are going in the wake of the rusade for more sunshine. But the inide roller curtain, that seems to be so side roller curtain, that seems to be so important a part in every window, is still persistent and in many rooms cuts down the amount of sunshine and light by about half. A window with the roller curtain drawn up to the top is usually regarded as a little out of order. Usually it is certainly not a very pleasant sighs.
